Your Executive Committee and Board of Governors are most reluctant to raise our dues, as almost all organizations have had to do in recent years, but it will probably be inevitable unless sufficient numbers of our loyal members contribute beyond their dues.

I earnestly request that you be helpful and generous to your old Squadron "A" organization.

World Monetary Plan To Downgrade Gold

Donald C. Cook, president of American Electric Power Co., yesterday proposed a new international monetary mechanism that would downgrade the role of gold while maintaining the dominance of the United States in monetary affairs.

Mr. Cook, a close adviser to President Johnson who rejected an offer to assume the job of Treasury Secretary, presented his ideas before the Investment Bankers Association of America at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Cook recommended that the world monetary powers work through the International Monetary Fund to establish a new reserve unit, the amount to be divided among participating countries by their respective gross national products.

In this respect, Mr. Cook's plan is somewhat similar to Robert V. Roosa's, the former Treasury Undersecretary, both insuring the continued dominance of the U. S. dollar as a world currency.

Mr. Cook, however, rejected Mr. Roosa's idea that the link to gold should be maintained at $35 an ounce preferring to do away entirely with the metal.

Mr. Cook said his new unit would be better than gold because of his stipulation that each participating country would be bound to contribute additional amounts of its currency in proportion to the decline in its international purchasing power.

At the IBA meeting, Andrew J. Melton jr., of Smith, Barney & Co., was elected chairman of the New York group. He succeeds Robert R. Krumm, of W. H. Morton & Co.

Edward Finch; Top State Judge

Edward Ridley Finch, 92, who spent 27 years on the bench as presiding justice of the Appellate Division of the state Supreme Court and as a judge of the state Court of Appeals, died yesterday at his summer home in Westhampton Beach, L. I. He also maintained a home at 21 E. 84th St.

Judge Finch, who retired from the bench at the mandatory age of 70 in 1943, resumed private practice at that time and remained active in the firm of Finch & Schaefer, 36 W. 44th St., until last December, when he suffered a stroke.

Born in New York, Judge Finch was a descendant of Abraham Finch, who came to America in 1630. He grew up in Plainfield, N. J., and was graduated with highest honors from Yale, in 1895, and the Columbia University Law School in 1898.

Judge Finch was briefly involved in politics, serving as a Republican member of the State Assembly from 1901 to 1903. He turned down an offer to become a judge in the state Court of Claims in 1915, but that same year was appointed a state Supreme Court justice. The following year he was endorsed by all parties for a 14-year term.

In 1922, Judge Finch was designated associate justice in the appellate division, First Department of the Supreme Court, winning redesignations in 1925 and 1930. He was re-elected to the Supreme Court for a second 14-year term in 1930, and the following year, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt named him presiding justice of the appellate division.

Three years later, however, Judge Finch resigned to run for the court of Appeals and was elected to a 14-year term on that bench. He did not finish the term because of the mandatory retirement age.

Judge Finch was a founder of the Honest Ballot Association and the Child Welfare

Judge Finch

Commission. He was author of numerous treatises on law, and from 1943 until his death served as president of The New York Law Journal.

For more than 70 years, Judge Finch was a prominent lay leader of the Episcopal Church. He was a lay delegate to a Triennial Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and from 1940 until his death was senior warden of St. Bartholomew's Church, 50th St. and Park Ave. He also served as a trustee of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Judge Finch married Mary Livingston Delafield in 1913. She died in 1961. They are survived by their children, a son, Edward R. Finch, jr., a partner in the Finch & Schaefer firm; and two daughters, Mrs. Francis W. Haskell and Mrs. Howard Ellis Cox.

A funeral service will be held at St. Bartholomew's tomorrow at noon. Among invited honorary pallbearers were Gov. Rockefeller, Mayor Wagner, former Gov. Thomas Dewey, Rep. John Lindsay, Thomas J. Gavin Brackenridge, 71, Dead; Was Vice President of G.M.A.C.

Special to The New York Times

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., Aug. 15—Gavin Brackenridge, former vice president of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, died this morning in Southampton Hospital of a heart attack Friday. He was 71 years old.

Mr. Brackenridge, who had a summer home in East Hampton, lived at 1165 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Mr. Brackenridge joined G.M.A.C. in 1919—the year the financing subsidiary of General Motors was founded. He was put in charge of branch operations in this country in 1955 and retired in 1959.

Was Ranked Nationally

From 1924 to 1933, Mr. Brackenridge's name appeared on the sports pages from time to time as a squash player for the Princeton Club.

"When on his game and in the mood to play his best, Brackenridge is a dangerous opponent for anyone in amateur competition," a sports writer wrote in 1928. In 1930, when he was 10th in the national ranking, he was eliminated from the fall tournament at the Columbia University Club in what was described as "an onslaught of savage hitting and prolonged rallies."

He was ranked sixth in 1932, when his opponent from the New York Athletic Club suddenly changed tactics during a tournament, bringing about "the downfall of Brackenridge, one of the cleverest and most agile players in the amateur ranks."

During World War I, Mr. Brackenridge went overseas as an aviator in the British Royal Flying Corps. He was a lieutenant, senior grade.

He is survived by his widow, the former Anne Ingersoll; a son, Gavin Jr., and a daughter, Belinda Anne.

A funeral service will be held Tuesday at 11 A.M. at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in East Hampton.

D. B. Callender, Arranged Big Realty Deals

On a pleasant May day 20 years ago, Donald B. Callender, in Chicago on business, was strolling along Lake Shore Drive when he came upon the fabulous Potter Palmer mansion at 1350.

The castellated brownstone residence had stood there for 63 years and had once been the center of Chicago's social life in the gaslit era both before and after the World's Columbia Exposition.

It had long been untenanted. Potter Palmer, the State St. merchant and hotel man who built it had been dead since 1902. His wife, who had ruled over it as queen of Chicago society, had been dead since 1918 and long before then had lived in Florida. The mansion had been a showplace to visitors for a fee for many years, but was now closed.

Mr. Callender, who for two years had been vice-president of Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., real estate firm of 12 E. 44th St., was little interested in the social or architectural history of the mansion. He was intensely interested in the 100,000-square-foot site with its 528-foot frontage on Chicago's residential Gold Coast.

"What an ideal location for an apartment house!" he said to himself. He asked Chicago real estate dealers why such a project had not been carried out. He learned that the late Vincent Bendix, automotive millionaire, had bought the property in 1928 as a site for a $15 million co-operative apartment project. The depression killed the plan; Mr. Bendix sold it at a loss and the Palmer estate eventually regained possession. It was for sale.

Coming home on the Twentieth Century Limited, Mr. Callender mulled over the possibilities of the Palmer property if it were in New York, and before he reached New York City he had conceived the idea of taking a New York builder to Chicago.

By the end of August, he had sold the Potter Palmer mansion to a New York City syndicate including Bing & Bing and the General Realty and Utilities Corp. as the principal members. They organized the 1350 Corp. and announced tentative plans for the "finest apartment house on Lake Shore Drive and in the Middle West."

But, like the Bendix project, this grandiose plan also fell through, and in the late 1940's ownership passed to a Chicago syndicate which, with Federal Housing Administration financial help, erected on the site in 1950 two 21-story rental apartment buildings.

Mr. Callender never made public the amount involved in the sale to the New York syndicate, or the size of his commission. Although the building plan projected fell through, the sale launched Mr. Callender on an aspect of real estate dealing in which he became recognized as a pioneer and leading exponent—inducing New York City investors to buy available properties throughout the country. He was still recognized as such when he died yesterday at Roosevelt Hospital after a short illness. He was 64.

At about the same time of the Chicago deal, Mr. Callender had acted as broker for the purchase by the Tishman Realty and Construction Co. of corner property at Fifth Ave. and 73d St. for apartment construction.

Through this connection, he handled the sale for the Tishman firm of the 250-room Sheraton Hotel in Washington to the Pick Hotel Corp., operators of a chain, in 1950.

In the same year, he again represented the General Realty & Utilities Corp. in another Chicago deal—this time the purchase of the controlling interest in the Palmolive Building on the southeast corner of Michigan Ave. and Walton Place. This building, erected in 1928 and 1929 by the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., was best known to the public for its powerful beacon light visible over a radius of several hundred miles from its height of 600 feet atop the office building.

Mr. Callender was the real estate broker in scores of other smaller sales of properties throughout the country to New York City investors.

Born in Brooklyn, he was graduated from Princeton University. He began his career with the real estate firm of Douglas L. Elliman & Co., Inc., in 1922 as a canvasser. He later specialized in sales, was elected to the board of directors in 1935, and was made a vice-president in 1938.

Besides private houses, sales he negotiated for Elliman included the 20-story apartment house known as 930 Fifth Ave.; the 17-story apartment house at 44 Gramercy Park; the corner of Madison Ave. and 54th St., and the Hotel Woodstock on Times Square.

He joined Albert B. Ashforth in 1942, and was senior vice-president and director when he died. He lived at 550 Park Ave.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Dorothy McMorro Green Callender; a stepson, Grant D. Green, and a sister, Mrs. George H. Dayton. A funeral service will be held at 1 p. m. Tuesday in the Central Presbyterian Church, Park Ave. and 64th St.

ALBERT PARDON MILLER '15

IN the death of Albert Pardon Miller on Dec. 30, 1964, Princeton University and its Class of 1915 lost a loyal, dynamic and dependable son. In college he was a member of the Colonial Club, and upon graduation he joined the Nassau Club and the Princeton Club of New York, as well as being a member of Squadron A in New York City.

In Shingle the boy never died. In 1915 he was a volunteer worker in boy's work at the Henry Street Settlement, and later joined in the work of the Neighborhood of the Central Presbyterian Church in New York. In World Wars One and Two and again in the Korean conflict he served in the U.S. Navy, achieving the rank of Chief Petty Officer. He had a record of five enlistments of four years each, the last one being at age 52, well beyond the age limit for enlistment in the Navy. He had a knack and ability to handle boys, teaching them how to handle all manners of craft and the arts of boatmanship. The highlight of his Naval career was when Jim Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, visited Shingle's post, and to the astonishment of one and all, and against all Naval regulations Chief Miller greeted and shook hands with Secretary Forrestal. Shingle was in working togs, Jim in his impeccable dress. Shingle's stock at the post hit a new high that day.

At the age of 50, Jim Healey united Shingle in Holy Matrimony to Jean Woolverton of Trenton. It was a happy event and Jean is loved by all of the Class who know her, and is a gracious and welcome member of the Class at all functions in Princeton. Joined to his love for boys, Shingle had a tender heart for all of his classmates who might be going through periods of sickness. He was a diligent and welcome visitor and there are many among us who well remember Shingle's constant solicitude on our behalf. Shingle was a huge, bumbling hulk of a man, loved by all, and who did not need to take a back seat to anyone in his love and loyalty for Princeton and to the Class of Nineteen Fifteen. May light perpetual shine upon his memory.

The sympathy of the Class goes out to Jean, and to other of Shingle's family. Sympathizing with them in their loss which is shared by all of us.

LOUIS GOLDSTEIN, JUDGE, DEAD AT 82

Sentenced Sutton in '52 After Slaying of Arnold Schuster

Special to The New York Times

MIAMI BEACH, April 15—Louis Goldstein, former Judge of the Kings County Court in New York, died tonight in his home here at 9102 Bay Harbor Road. His age was 82.

Judge Goldstein retired from the bench at the end of 1953 but continued to serve for several years as a trial examiner for the New York City Board of Education.

He participated in a number of well-known court cases. In 1952 he sentenced Willie Sutton, the bank robber, to two separate terms of 15 years each for violation of the Sullivan Law against the carrying of concealed weapons in New York State.

"These sentences ought to be sufficient to insure that Sutton is sealed off for life in a place where he can no longer bring misery and death to the public," the judge said.

"If Sutton were not the miserable character he is," he went on, "the chain of circumstances which led up to the death of Arnold Schuster never would have happened." Mr. Schuster was the young man who gave the police the tip that led to Sutton's arrest. He was shot by an unidentified gunman not long afterward.

Set Conviction Aside

In another case, it was Judge Goldstein's faith in the innocence of a man who had spent 15 years in jail as a murderer that led to his release. The man, John Cacopardo, later became a Protestant minister and wrote a book on his experiences.

On Oct. 28, 1952, the judge, over the objections of the District Attorney's office, set aside Mr. Cacopardo's conviction. He had been sentenced in 1937 in a case in which, the evidence showed, he had been "framed" by an uncle who headed a Philadelphia "poison ring." The uncle was subsequently convicted and executed.

Judge Goldstein also presided over part of the trial of the Brooklyn gangster mob known as Murder, Incorporated.

He was born in Brooklyn and attended its public schools, New York University and the New York Law School. Early in his career he became an assistant and acting district attorney in Brooklyn. He personally tried or participated in the investigation of more than 5,000 cases while in the prosecutor's office. In 1911 he was elected to a term in the State Assembly and in 1915 he was appointed to the committee to revise the state banking laws.

In 1929 he was elected to the City Court in Kings County. He was re-elected in 1939, after having received the endorsement of both major parties—the Fusion party and the Citizens' Union—and all bar associations. He was elected to the County Court in 1941.

Judge Goldstein also performed many civic duties in New York. He was for four years chairman of the Board of Judges of Kings County.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Bert H. Weinberg Goldstein, and two sisters, Mrs. Rose Rosenberg and Mrs. Estelle Lyons.

Street, quietly and alone. His marriage to the former actress Virginia Peine ended in divorce in 1960. They had no children.

In an interview two years ago, he said he was depressed by having to visit Frank Campbell's funeral home, Madison Avenue and 81st Street, "with increasing frequency as the years creep up on me and our tired friends surrender their ghosts."

"When at last the Angel of Death does visit me," he added wryly, "you can be sure there is one question I'm going to ask him—'What is the name of Paul Revere's horse?' I still don't know."

He continued to write. His biography of Jennie Grossinger, a founder of the Grossinger resort hotel, will be published by Viking in June.

Among his other books were "The Wounded Don't Cry" and "London Diary," both published in 1941, "Convoy" (1942), "Only the Stars Are Neutral" (1942), "Dress Rehearsal" (1943), "The Curtain Rises" (1944) and "Officially Dead" (1945).

Besides his brother, Mr. Reynolds leaves two sisters, Mrs. Marjorie Kirk and Mrs. Constance Furey.

A requiem mass will be celebrated at 10 A.M. tomorrow in St. Ignatius Loyola Roman Catholic Church, Park Avenue at 84th Street.

Maurice Pate of UNICEF Dead; Helped World's Needy Children

Directed U.N. Relief Agency
Since Its Founding in '46—
Started as Hoover Aide

Special to The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Jan. 19—Maurice Pate, who made the name UNICEF synonymous with help for the world's needy children, died of a heart attack today.

Mr. Pate, who was 70 years old, collapsed last night while walking with his wife and was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The Secretary General, U Thant, announced Mr. Pate's death to the General Assembly and then led the delegates in observing a minute of silence in tribute to "this distinguished and tireless servant of international cooperation."

UNICEF—the United Nations Children's Fund—is a name known, respected and loved throughout the world, Mr. Thant told the assembly. The credit for its unique achievement in promoting the health of children and mothers belongs to Mr. Pate, who was "truly a great humanitarian," he said.

Only Head of Fund

It was as executive director of the children's fund—its first and only director—that Mr. Pate achieved worldwide recognition, although his career in international relief work spanned 48 years, two world wars and many lesser conflicts.

His reputation was so solidly based that he was able to move across political barriers that blocked others.

In 1956, in the midst of the Hungarian uprising against Soviet control, Mr. Pate flew into Budapest and spent days walking freely around the battle-scarred streets at a time when the Hungarian Government resolutely refused a proposed visit by Dag Hammarskjöld, the late Secretary General, or any other United Nations official. Mr. Pate returned with a report that the Hungarians' needs were "desperate." UNICEF aid followed.

More recently, when disorders broke out in the newly independent African state of the Congo in July 1960, Mr. Pate was one of the first United Nations officials summoned by the Secretary General. One day after the call he was on his way to Léopoldville to begin the distribution of emergency foodstuffs.

The swift response was a reflection of long experience with crisis situations. "In an emergency operation," Mr. Pate said at the time, "speed and flexibility are essential."

Typically, he was quick to add that he had learned these pointers from Herbert Hoover in his World War I era relief operations. Mr. Pate's association with Mr. Hoover was a life-long influence.

Worked With Hoover

It began when Mr. Pate, fresh from Princeton University, went to work for Mr. Hoover's Belgian Relief Commission. At the end of World War I, Mr. Hoover assigned him to head the child-feeding operation the American relief administration was undertaking in Poland.

In 1939, only a few hours after Hitler's Army entered Poland, Mr. Pate was on his way to Washington to volunteer for relief work. With Mr. Hoover's backing, he organized the privately operated Commission for Polish Relief, which shipped supplies to the Poles. Later, he joined the American Red Cross as director of relief to prisoners of war. In the next five years this organization shipped $170 million worth of supplies to American captives.

In 1946, Mr. Hoover summoned him again, this time to accompany him on a survey for President Harry S. Truman of the war-devastated countries. They visited 27 countries and out of this trip and the recommendations by Mr. Hoover came the United States sponsorship for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund. The words emergency and international were dropped several years ago, but the name UNICEF was retained.

UNICEF was set up by the United Nations General Assembly on Dec. 11, 1946. Mr. Pate was named its director by the Secretary General in consultation with the new agency's policymaking board. The post carries the rank of an Under Secretary.

From the outset, Mr. Pate attempted to win the government support and financial backing that would enable Unicef to meet its goals. Initially, he set out to try to care for 20 million children by supplying milk, clothing and cod liver oil. Since its start, the United States has been the main contributor to the operation.

Under his direction, UNICEF projects have become a worldwide operation, supplying aid in 116 countries and territories. With the end of the immediate postwar period, the emphasis has shifted from feeding to health, nutrition and child-care programs of long-range benefit, although drums of powdered milk with the identifying stencil "UNICEF" still go where they are needed.

In 1960, Mr. Pate was suggested for the Nobel peace prize by the Norwegian Committee for UNICEF. But he told the Norwegians that he could not accept the honor for himself and suggested that UNICEF be nominated instead.

Gave Few Speeches

Mr. Pate, a 6-footer with a shock of white hair, was self-effacing in his approach to his post. He made few speeches to large audiences. A Republican, he found political support for his program from both parties in the United States and retained financial backing through changes in administration in Washington.

Significant financial support for UNICEF has come also from individual and group contributions, from the purchase of UNICEF greeting cards or through the nickels and dimes collected by children at Halloween. The orange and black boxes distributed for the Halloween "Trick or Treat" sponsored by the United States Committee for UNICEF were turned in last year with more than $2 million.

Without children of his own, he managed to organize help for tens of millions of children, all given without regard to race, color or nationality.

Mr. Pate was born in Pender, Neb., on Oct. 14, 1894. After attending Princeton, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, he served briefly in a small country bank in Iowa. This career ended when he volunteered for relief work with Mr. Hoover in Belgium and entered public service.

In 1927, he married Jadwiga Monkowski in Poland. They were divorced 10 years later. She died in 1960.

He is survived by his widow, Martha Lucas Pate, former president of Sweet Briar College, whom he married in 1961; a sister, Mrs. Ann LeFevre of Denver, and two brothers, Richard E. Pate Jr. and Theodore Pate, both of Denver.
